NABA names a new president

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The Nashville Chapter of the National Association of Black Accountants (NABA) is proud to announce that Eugene Hampton II recently began his term as president of the of the Nashville Chapter for 2009-2011.

Hampton has been a member of NABA for five years and served as the Director of Professional Development for the Nashville Chapter from July 2006 through June 2009 and Souvenir Committee chair for the NABA Southern Region Student Conference from January 2008 to present.

Other professional affiliations include the Nashville Chapter Association of Government Accountants (AGA), Tennessee State University Alumni Association and Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity, Inc. He has served as a question writer for the AGA Certified Government Financial Manager (CGFM) Exam in 2008, on the cut score team for the AGA CGFM Exam in 2008 and as a two-year director on Chapter Executive Committee for the AGA Nashville Chapter from July 2009 to present.

Hampton has been with the Tennessee Comptroller of the Treasury's Division of County Audit for more than 12 years. He is a legislative auditor having oversight responsibilities over seven counties in the Middle Tennessee area. He has a Bachelor of Business Administration in Accounting from Tennessee State University and is a certified public accountant (CPA) and CGFM.

NABA is one of the premier professional organizations in the nation representing more than 100,000 African Americans and minorities to further their educational and professional aspirations in related fields of accounting, consulting, finance, information technology and tax.
